Kansas.

---

States are not great
Except as men may make them.
Men are not great except they do and dare
But states, like men,
Have destinies that take them —
That bear them on, not knowing why or where.

—WARE.

Walls of Corn.

---

What do they hold — these walls of corn,
Whose banners toss on the breeze of morn?
He who questions may soon be told:
A great state's wealth these walls enfold.
Open the atlas, conned by rule,
In the olden days of the district school:
Point to the rich and bounteous land,
That yields such fruits to the toiler's hand.
“Treeless desert,” they called it then,
Haunted by beasts, and forsook by men.
Little they knew what wealth untold
Lay hid where the desolate prairies rolled.
Who would have dared, with brush or pen,
As this land is now, to paint it then?

—MRS. ALLERTON.

Kansas Historical Society.

THE Kansas historical exhibit at the World's Columbian Exposition is intended to indicate in some measure the character of the work of the Kansas State Historical Society. The primary object of the Society is that of preserving the materials of the history of Kansas. Beyond this, the scope of its work has been extended to that of making up a general library of reference. The library now contains 70,318 volumes, namely: 14,414 bound volumes, 43,271 unbound volumes and pamphlets, and 12,633 bound newspaper files and volumes of periodicals.

A special work of the Society is that of making a collection of the periodical literature of the state and country, more especially of newspapers. The current issues of newspapers are regarded as the best materials of history. They contain a record of progress and a record of the social life of the people. In them is contained every essential fact connected with the growth and development of the community in which they are published: Marriages and deaths; the establishment of business and manufacturing enterprises, and their changes; transfers of property; the erection of all important buildings; the results of elections; the opening of streets; the building of railroads; fires and floods; the municipal policies suggested, discussed, and adopted; and the daily life, thought, hopes, triumphs and disappointments of the people. The work of the Kansas Historical Society in this department, proportionately, far exceeds that of any other library. The newspaper collections are chiefly of those local to Kansas. Of the 12,392 bound volumes of newspapers in the library, 9,054 are of Kansas newspapers. These cover the period of the entire history of Kansas since the passage of the law opening Kansas Territory to settlement. The first issue of the first Kansas newspaper is dated September 16, 1854. The files of that newspaper are in the library of the Society.

The library contains a complete collection of the publications of the state and territory of Kansas from the time of the organization of government within its limits, and a nearly complete collection of all the books and pamphlets of all classes published in Kansas. It has a very full collection of the publications of the United States Government, beginning with those of the first Congress, in 1789, and including the scientific and other publications issued by all the departments. The Society is making a full library of the reports and publications of all societies and institutions; such publications as contain the materials of the history of current thought, investigation and experience in all departments of history, politics, sociology, religion, science, and the arts.

The Society was organized in 1875, and began its work early in 1876. Its collections are the property of the state, and are kept in the state capitol, in rooms provided for the Society's use. The expenses of the work of the Society, and of purchases to augment its library, are defrayed by the state.

The Exhibit.

The World's Fair exhibit contains a selection of portraits, pictures and statuary from the Society's collections, also a selection of Kansas state publications, and of books of history, science, and literature, relating to Kansas, or by Kansas authors. As a special feature of the Society is that of preserving files of newspapers and periodicals, the newspapers published in two counties of the state are exhibited: those of Douglas, one of the oldest counties, and those of Morton, one of the newest. The regular issues of all of the newspapers in all of the counties are thus being preserved.

The portraits, pictures and statuary are in the south-central room of the second story of the Kansas building. The books, newspaper files and portrait albums are in the educational room, on the same floor.

The Kansas State Historical Society invites exchanges with all societies and institutions.

Portraits and Pictures.

THE portraits and pictures in the exhibit are selected from those which have been collected in the State Historical Society since its organization, with a few others placed in the exhibit in order to complete certain groups. At the opening of the war, he enlisted in the union army, was employed in scouting service, was eventually taken prisoner, and was confined in confederate prisons in Mississippi and at Richmond, Va. At the latter place he was tried and convicted, and in September, 1863, executed as a spy. His father always maintained the belief that the acts of his son were simply those of duty in the hazardous scouting service in which he was employed.

During the war he took great interest in the enlistment of colored troops, and the fifty-fourth and fifty-fifth Massachusetts regiments and the fifth United States cavalry were largely recruited through his instrumentality. He bore the rank of major in the army by recommendation of Secretary Stanton. He died in New York, in 1867. His widow, Mrs. Mary E. Stearns, has been a munificent contributor to the library and collections of the Kansas State Historical Society.

He lived to see Kansas a free state, and slavery abolished. He was always a most highly-respected and useful citizen of Kansas. He died October 19, 1888.

Many citizens of Kansas who remember John Brown as he appeared in the stirring events of August and September, 1856, recognize the portrait without the beard as far the most satisfactory.

The men whose portraits are shown in the picture were citizens of Lawrence, Kas., and vicinity, who proceeded, in July, 1859, from Lawrence by wagon to St. Joseph, Mo., and crossed the Missouri river in the night-time, and by artifice deluded the keeper of the jail so as to gain admission inside. They then, by intimidation, silenced the jailer, and brought from the prison, across the Missouri river to Kansas,

Dr. John Doy, who had been imprisoned on the charge of kidnapping slaves from Missouri into Kansas. The party reached Lawrence in safety, and there the picture, of which this is a copy, was taken, amid the plaudits of the populace. No effort was made for the reimprisonment of Doctor Doy, nor were his rescuers molested. The names of the rescuers were: Maj. James B. Abbott, captain of the party; Silas S. Soule, J. A. Pike, S. J. Willes, Joseph Gardner, Thomas Simmons, Charles Doy, Jacob Sinex, John E. Stewart, and George Hay.

Brown, who presented the Historical Society with this copy, gives in substance the following account of the picture: Photo copy of the painting of heroic size, which I saw on exhibition in Utica, N. Y., soon after John Brown's death. I give a key with the picture, as I understood from the explanation given me by the artist who produced the painting, and kindly made me the copy: (1) The central figure, JOHN BROWN. (2) Above him, the Virginia coat of arms. (3) In foreground, at the right, statue of liberty blindfolded. (4) At his left, two sympathizing friends. (5) At his right, two officials with imbecile expression of disgust of the prisoners noticing the colored woman and child. (6) The sheriff, with angry look at the woman, whose child's face seems but the reflection of his own.

In 1860, he was brought to Washington as a witness before Senator Mason's committee for the investigation of John Brown's Harper's Ferry raid. Refusing to testify, Mr. Hyatt was placed in jail at Washington, and there confined 13 weeks. He there gave strict attention to his New York business interests, which were extensive, and freely gave his portrait to those who sought it, with his autograph and the place, Washington jail, boldly inscribed. This portrait (No. 66) was presented to Dr. Thomas H. Webb, secretary of the New England Emigrant Aid Company, April 21, 1860. Under this charge they were confined in a temporary prison at Leecompton. By the March following all had escaped but 13. These were then unconditionally pardoned by Governor Geary.
